

Title: Where do you go to get financial advice?

Participant 1: I might research stuff online or just listen to what my family and friends have experienced generally, that would be it.

Participant 2: If I have any questions, I would go to the bank and ask. So yeah, I go online on the internet.

Participant 3: I don't really get financial advice to be honest.

Participant 4: From my family, from my friends. I rarely ask outside of this sphere.

Participant 5: My uncle, he works in Revenue so I'm like, "Hey, what do I do?" And he just goes, "Do this stuff and you can get money off the government." and I go, "Class."

Participant 6: I probably just ask friends and family for advice to be honest. I don't really go looking online for financial advice.

Participant 7: Normally I ask everything related to financial you know, stuff, to my mother because she has a basis in financial education.

Participant 8: I'd say I would read up on it myself. I don't really - I think if you go to the bank to get financial advice you get advice what they want to give you. I wouldn't trust it too much.

Participant 9: I don't. I'm very bad. I don't think I've ever received financial advice from anybody.
